DAY 1 MINI-PROJECT | Prompting Mastery

Sherin Mary P.J

STEP 1 — YOUR PROMPT (MOST IMPORTANT)

You are an expert cinematic storyteller and emotional screenplay writer.

Your task is to create a deeply emotional 5-minute romantic short film story titled “UNTIL THAT ONE FACE” inspired by Gautham Vasudev Menon (GVM) storytelling style.

IMPORTANT INSTRUCTIONS:

- Do not create random scenes outside the given story flow
- Do not change the emotional theme
- Do not generate robotic dialogues
- Avoid generic romance writing
- Focus on emotional realism and natural storytelling
- Keep the narration poetic, soft, and visually immersive
- Make every emotion feel human and relatable
- The story should feel like a memory, not fiction

MAIN CHARACTERS:

SHERLY:

- College girl
- Innocent and emotional
- Long wavy black hair
- Soft-hearted personality
- Travels daily in bus listening to music
- Experiences love for the first time emotionally

KARTHIK:

- Tall South Indian boy
- Green shirt during first meeting
- Messy frizzy hair
- Calm expressive eyes
- Gentle, caring, emotionally mature
- Speaks less but expresses through actions and eyes

STORY STRUCTURE:

OPENING:

Sherly travels daily to college wearing AirPods and listening to “Uyire Un Uyirena...”

One morning she notices Karthik near the bus stop.

Their eyes meet for a few seconds.

That one moment silently changes her emotionally.

EMOTIONAL DEVELOPMENT:

- She keeps thinking about him during classes
- Everyday they exchange silent eye contact
- No talking initially
- She slowly starts waiting for mornings
- Saturdays and Sundays become emotionally painful because she cannot see him

CONFESSION:

Sherly gathers courage and emotionally confesses her feelings naturally without cinematic overdrاما.

LOVE JOURNEY:

Show their relationship growing through:

- Tea shop conversations
- Rain walks
- Beach sunsets

- Bike rides
- Late-night talks
- Caring gestures
- Silent comfort
- Emotional safety
- Small fights and cute patch-ups

ENDING:

Show their love remaining strong even after years.

Ending should feel peaceful, emotional, timeless, and soulful.

EMOTIONAL TONE:

- Soft
- Nostalgic
- Realistic
- Intimate
- Peaceful
- Soulful

INCLUDE NATURAL POETIC LINES LIKE:

“Sometimes love enters through the eyes before reaching the heart.”

“The most beautiful conversations happen without words.”

“Some love stories never fade.”

WRITING STYLE:

- Use cinematic narration
- Use emotional pacing
- Write naturally flowing scenes
- Keep dialogues realistic and minimal
- Focus more on emotions than explanations
- Avoid repetitive writing
- Make the audience emotionally connected to the characters

OUTPUT FORMAT:

1. Title

2. Opening narration
3. Story progression
4. Emotional confession
5. Love montage
6. Emotional ending
7. Final poetic quote

FINAL GOAL:

The audience should feel warmth, longing, comfort, nostalgia, peace, and true love after reading the story.

Image Prompt

Create a cinematic romantic collage poster for a short film titled “UNTIL THAT ONE FACE”.

Main couple:

- Tall South Indian boy wearing a green shirt
- Messy frizzy hair
- Calm emotional eyes
- Shorter South Indian girl with very long wavy hair
- Her height reaches near his shoulder
- Soft pastel pink outfit

Center image should show them standing close, deeply lost in eye contact with emotional chemistry.

Around them create multiple cinematic moments representing their full love journey:

- Girl sitting in a college bus wearing AirPods
- First eye-contact at bus stop
- Classroom distraction scene
- Rainy evening moments

- Tea shop conversations
- Bike rides together
- Beach sunset memories
- Silent emotional love scenes
- Growing old together on a bench

Visual style:

- GVM-inspired cinematography
- Warm pastel colors
- Peach, beige, cream, golden sunlight tones
- Dreamy romantic atmosphere
- Rain aesthetics
- Soft cinematic glow
- Emotional realistic expressions
- Nostalgic love-story mood
- Vertical movie poster composition

Typography:

Large stylish handwritten title:

“UNTIL THAT ONE FACE”

Include soft poetic quotes across the poster like:

“Sometimes love enters through the eyes before reaching the heart.”

“5 seconds... Everyday... My favorite part of the day.”

“Some love stories never fade.”

The overall poster should feel emotional, soulful, aesthetic, dreamy, romantic, and timeless.

STEP 2 — SHORT FILM DESCRIPTION

A college girl named Sherly unexpectedly falls in love with a stranger named Karthik during her daily bus journey. What begins with silent eye contact slowly grows into a deep emotional connection filled with longing, soft romance, memories, and pure love. Through rain walks, tea shop conversations, bike rides, emotional silence, and years of togetherness, their relationship becomes a timeless love story that never fades.

UNTIL THAT ONE FACE

A college girl unexpectedly falls in love with a stranger she sees every morning during her bus journey. What starts with silent eye contact slowly transforms into a soulful lifelong love story.

Some people don't enter our life loudly. They arrive silently... like a song we never skip again. For Sherly, love was never important. She never searched for it, never waited for it, never believed one person could change an ordinary routine into something beautiful. But sometimes, life introduces someone unexpectedly... and after that, nothing feels the same anymore.

One fine morning, the city moved in its usual chaos. College buses, traffic sounds, people running behind time. But inside one small bus window, Sherly sat peacefully with her AirPods on, listening to "Uyire Un Uyirena..." That song wasn't just music that day. It felt like fate playing softly in the background.

As the bus slowly stopped near her college, she casually stood up to leave. And then... she saw him. A tall boy in a green shirt. Frizzy hair moving softly in the wind. Calm eyes carrying a strange warmth. Not dramatic. Not sharp. But the kind of eyes that make your heart pause for one second without permission. And honestly... that one second was enough. Enough to disturb her peace. Enough to change her mornings. Enough to unknowingly begin a love story.

> "Sometimes love doesn't enter through the heart... it enters through the eyes."

That entire day, Sherly sat inside the classroom pretending to listen. The professor continued teaching, friends laughed loudly, time moved normally... but her mind remained at that bus stop, replaying that green shirt and those eyes again and again. Because for the first time in her life, someone she never met started feeling familiar.

From the very next morning, everything changed. Suddenly mornings became exciting. She started waking up earlier, choosing dresses carefully, checking herself twice in the mirror. Not because she wanted to impress the world... but because somewhere in her heart, she hoped he would look at her once again. And he did. Everyday. Just five seconds. No talking. No touching. No "Hi." Only eyes meeting eyes. Yet those silent five seconds slowly became the happiest part of her day.

> "The most beautiful conversations in life are sometimes spoken without words."

But love also has cruel moments. Saturday. Sunday. The two longest days for her. Because missing someone you never officially had hurts differently. She didn't even know his name properly, yet his absence felt heavy. She kept listening to the same song repeatedly, hoping

Monday would arrive faster. Somewhere near that bus stop, her heart had started waiting for someone... and that waiting itself became love.

One evening, Sherly finally decided. "No more silent love." Her hands trembled. Heartbeat racing uncontrollably. She slowly walked toward him. Every step felt louder than the world itself. Finally, she stood in front of him.

"Karthik..."

That was the first time she said his name. But the moment he looked into her eyes, every prepared sentence disappeared. Because some eyes are dangerous. They make us forget language itself. She smiled nervously and walked away without saying anything. But that night, she realized something. Love isn't about perfect dialogues. It's about courage.

The next day, she returned with that courage. She stood before him again and softly said:

> "Hi... I'm Sherly. I don't know what you're doing to my heart. I can't explain this feeling. The way you look at me... it's just... uff. I don't know whether this is love or not... but I pray to God that this becomes a beautiful love story."

For a moment, the world became silent. No traffic sounds. No college noise. Only two hearts standing honestly in front of each other. Karthik smiled softly... and that smile felt safer than home.

After that, love happened naturally. Like rain finding the earth. Tea shop conversations became memories. Bus rides became therapy. Late-night calls became addictions. Even silence between them felt comfortable. Days became months, and months slowly became four beautiful years. Not because life was perfect, but because they never stopped choosing each other. Even after fights, one wink from Karthik was enough for Sherly to forget everything. Because his love was never loud. It was gentle. Soft. Protective. The kind of love that makes a girl feel emotionally safe.

> "In a world where people easily give up on love... they stayed."

Karthik never treated Sherly like an option. He treated her like peace. And Sherly? Even in crowded places, her eyes searched only for him. Because when love becomes real, one person slowly becomes your entire comfort zone.

Today, after years, nothing has changed. Same eyes. Same care. Same love. The world changed. People changed. Relationships changed. But their love didn't. Because theirs was never just attraction. It was two souls silently promising each other:

> "Even at the end of life... I'll still choose you."

And somewhere in the background, "Uyire Un Uyirena..." still continues playing softly... 🎧🌧️
